Wields Shovel in Quarrel and Splits Another's Head, Charge Against Roy Unger

Assault And Battery Action Follows Alleged Battle On County Farm.

HELD FOR COURT

A wheelbarrow, an argument, some profane words and a shovel all combined to bring about the arrest, Wednesday afternoon, of Roy Unger, of near Bendersville, on a charge of aggravated assault and battery upon the person of Solomon Hinkle.

Unger, according to Trooper Davis and Officer George Aughinbaugh, who made the arrest, is said to have struck Hinkle on the head with a shovel, inflicting a deep wound. Unger posted $300 bail before Justice of the Peace John C. Shearer for his appearance at the next term of court.

Unger, in a telephone conversation with The Times this afternoon, said the argument took place more than a week ago on the Heller Fruit farm. He said that Hinkle abused him and attacked him and that he attempted to prevent the attack with a shovel.

Unger said that he had been working with a wheelbarrow and that some of the employees moved his wheelbarrow into the basement of the home. Unger said he removed the wheelbarrow from the basement, told the employees that if they wanted the wheelbarrow they could use it and that an argument resulted.

The Bendersville defendant declared that Hinkle abused him, using profane language, and that he later threatened to kill him. Unger said he picked up the shovel to prevent Hinkle from attacking him and that another employee grabbed the shovel, turned it and in doing so the instrument struck Hinkle on the head.

Hinkle could not be reached by telephone to get his version of the story. It was said that Hinkle received treatment from Dr. W. E. Wolf, of Arendtsville, but the latter could not be reached to learn the nature of Hinkle's injury.

46,000 FAIL IN FIRST TEST FOR DRIVING PERMIT

All Except About 3 Per Cent Of Applicants For Licenses Finally Succeed.

FIGURES GIVEN

If you "flunked" your first test for an automobile driver's license, there is no need for you to feel especially badly about it, as 45,986 other beginners did exactly the same thing the first seven months of this year.

Although 25 per cent of all applicants failed to "get by" the motor patrolman on the first examination, second tests have aided drivers to the extent that only three per cent of the original applicants are unable to meet requirements ultimately.

In the first seven months, the motor patrol examined 176,062 applicants, of whom 45,986 failed at their first test. Reports of the examiners show that of the failures, approximately two-thirds do not qualify because of lack of sufficient ability to handle a motor vehicle properly and one-third because of ignorance of motor laws.

Before examinations were given, the patrol required headlamp adjustments to be corrected on 29,740 cars, ordered correct placement of license plates on 16,690 vehicles, and ordered brakes adjusted on 5,379 vehicles.

Truck Turns Over Near York Springs

A large motor truck loaded with a cargo of cantaloupes valued at $300 turned over on the Carlisle pike about a mile south of York Springs early Wednesday morning after its driver lost control of the vehicle as it descended the hill leading to the bridge over Bernum creek. Its contents were spilled in countless directions.

The truck, owned by Wagner Brothers, Harrisburg produce dealers, was being driven toward the capital city from Baltimore, where the cantaloupes had been received. After the heavily laden machine left the hard surface of the highway it grazed one tree at the side of the road and struck another, after which it turned over in a ditch. Neither the driver nor his companion was injured.

Freakish Storm Leaves Trail of Damage Along Foot of the Mountains

Windows Shattered, Fruit Trees Stripped As Hail And Rain, Whipped By Strong Wind, Jump Zig-Zag Across Green Ridge And Through The Valley.

STORM CONTINUES ONE HOUR

A slashing hail, rain and windstorm that reached near-cyclonic proportions whipped and whizzed across Green Ridge, and along the foot of South Mountains, tore through McKnightstown, Orrtanna, Mummaburg and Biglerville, battered windows from their sash, pelted apples and peaches from hundreds of fruit trees, ripped and slashed corn from hundreds of stalks and literally sliced away thousands of dollars from fruit growers and farmers, Tuesday afternoon.

The storm lasted less than an hour, but during its brief outburst it laid waste a patch of property that ran in zig-zag fashion across the foot of South Mountains.

Hailstones larger than a good sized marble smashed hundreds of window panes, drove cattle to sheltering roofs and human beings were forced to seek the cover of their homes.

A terrific wind whipped across the ridge and interlocking with the large hailstones wrought such fury that lives were endangered, motorists screamed to sudden stops at the side of the road and waited the spending of the storm's strength.

CHILD OF 12 FOUND SLAIN

Missing Since Starting Errand For Mother; Body Found In Gunny Sacks.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 15 (AP).—Believed to have been attacked and slain by a stranger, the body of 12-year-old Dorothy Aune, missing since Tuesday, was found yesterday bound and gagged and jammed into two gunny sacks in a lonely spot in South Minneapolis.

Immediately on discovery of the crime an intensive manhunt throughout the city for the slayer who dumped the child's body from an automobile close to a railroad track nearly two miles from the girl's home was begun. An elderly man, seen annoying young girls near the Aune home and trying to induce them to accept rides in his automobile during the past three weeks, was sought.

All Police Ordered Out
Aroused by the brutality of the crime, Mayor William F. Kunze ordered all available policemen out on the manhunt and appealed to the state to offer a reward for the killer.

Coroner Gilbert Seashore said the young victim had been strangled by a wad of cotton thrust into her mouth. There also was a mark, as from fingers, on her throat, and she had been attacked, he said. There were several wounds on the body, which, however, was fully clothed.

Ropes held the girl's hands tight behind her back and were wound about her neck and mouth. Her feet also were bound with ropes. The gunny sacks which held the body were fastened together at the waist by strands of copper wire.

Ice Men Make Discovery
Two ice men, starting their early morning rounds, discovered the girl's body. She had been missing fourteen hours after starting from her home at 4 p. m. Tuesday for a grocery store four blocks away.

While the search for Dorothy's slayer was under way, police were asked to find another girl, Lorraine Jensen, 13, who has not been seen since Sunday when she left home for a theatre.

SNOOK VERDICT CARRIES DEATH DRY FAILURE TO CONGRESS

Slayer Of Ohio Co-ed Hears Fateful Words Without Emotion.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 15 (AP).—A verdict of guilty, carrying with it death in the electric chair as the penalty, was returned yesterday against Dr. James H. Snook. It was brought in 28 minutes after the jury of 11 men and one woman had received the case against the confessed slayer of Miss Theora K. Hix, Ohio State university co-ed.

The jury took but one ballot, and so speedily was the action that it had to wait 19 minutes in the jury room before the defendant could be brought in and the court made ready to hear the verdict.

Fails To Display Emotion
As the court clerk read the finding, the former veterinary professor, his face set in the stern expression that is a characteristic of him, clutched at the arm of the chair in which he was sitting, but showed no other emotion.

If Dr. Snook comprehended the gravity of the situation in which the jury had placed him, he did not let his feelings betray him.

The dead quiet of the crowded court room, as the members of the jury were being polled to ascertain if the verdict was their true finding, gave way to a pandemonium of noise. A few minutes later all eyes began searching the room for a sight of the defendant's wife, Mrs. Helen M. Snook, and his aged mother, Mrs. Abner Snook, who had been with him a few minutes earlier.

Wife And Mother Absent

But neither was to be found. They were not present when the verdict was returned. The news was carried to them in another room of the court house, where they had gone to await the jury's decision. An hour later they left the building in tears and were whisked away in the deputy's car.

Astounded by the suddenness of the verdict and displeased that the jury had not taken longer to consider the case, E. O. Ricketts, one of the members of the defense counsel, announced immediately that a motion for a new trial would be filed within the required three days.

To Hear Motion Monday
Trial Judge Henry L. Scarlett tentatively fixed 9 a. m., Monday, as the hour and date for a hearing of the motion.

If it is overruled, Judge Scarlett said he would impose the death sentence at once, and Snook's attorneys will proceed with the preparation of an appeal to a higher court.

The jurors indicated by their verdict that they had accepted as truth the confession which Dr. Snook repudiated on the witness stand when he denied having told any one he severed the young co-ed's jugular vein with his pocket knife to end her suffering from hammer blows inflicted during a quarrel at the New York Central Riff Range on the night of June 13.

FATALLY STRICKEN ON WAY TO VISIT DOCTOR

Hagerstown—While being taken in an automobile to the office of the medical examiner of the Pennsylvania railroad at Fourth and Chestnut streets Tuesday night, John Ambrose Hagerman, 56, of 1909 North Fourth street, employed at Enginehouse No. 2, Pennsylvania railroad, died of a heart attack.

Hagerman had just reported for work, when he was stricken. He told three fellow employees he felt ill. The fellow employees, Harry E. Bender, 1919 Rolleston street; R. K. Reed, 303 Calder street, and E. C. Hamman, Twelfth street, New Cumberland, put him in an automobile to take him to the medical examiner. Hagerman was found dead when the auto arrived at the doctor's office.

C. E. Dugan, deputy coroner, conducted an investigation and said death was due to a heart attack.

4 BOYS HELD ON THEFT CHARGES

Hagerstown—With the finding of the bathing suits, jewelry and money stolen from an outing party at Snyder's Landing, on July 15, four youths, all of Sharpsburg, have been arrested in connection with the case and are being held at the Washington County jail for hearings.

Three of the boys, William Owens, 15, Charles Owens, 13, and Francis Hull, 19, will be charged with the theft of the goods, and Aaron Deloney, 18, will be charged with receiving stolen goods.

The boys were arrested at their homes in Sharpsburg Tuesday evening by Juvenile Officer Leonard Saylor and Deputy Albert Crampton. Officer Saylor said he and Officer Crampton had been working on the case for several days, but not until Tuesday did they secure enough evidence to warrant arrests.

HISTORIC MILL IN FRANKLIN BURNED

Brown's Mill, a historic structure built immediately after the Revolutionary War and the oldest mill in Franklin county, was Tuesday afternoon about 3 o'clock completely destroyed by fire. The mill is located about three miles north of Greencastle. The damage is estimated at $15,000.

While the origin of the blaze is undetermined, it is presumed the fire started from the sparks of a gasoline engine which had been running in the mill.

Guy Small, owner of the mill, who was inside the building, detected the odor of smoke and when he went to investigate he found the first floor completely filled with smoke. Making his escape through a window he summoned Greencastle and Chambersburg firemen who made a valiant effort to save the historic structure. It was announced the mill would not be replaced.

Death Treasure

By R. A. J. WALLING

SYNOPSIS: Buried treasure—archaeological gems—found beneath Newplace Abbey, attract Roger Pell to Blackwater and into a circle of vicious hatred. Bertram Fotherbury, now owner of the ancient abbey, is friendly but the person having is especially bitter in his animosity toward Pell and spreads a story that Pell is an ex-convict. Tom Grenades discredits Marling's claims, likes Pell but is more concerned with Veronica Seabrooke's captivating charms. Veronica mysteriously is being drawn into the baffling tangle. Late one night, Grenades and two friends, Rouben and Southerfield, hear a woman cry out. They run to the road and find Veronica, badly frightened but unharmed.

Chapter 4

A MIDNIGHT SURPRISE

ROYLE and I dashed to Veronica's side.

"Hullo, Andy, is it you?" she said, puffing. "And Mr. Grenofen?"

"Veronica," Royle was insisting. "What is it?"

"Nothing, Andy, only a little game of hide-and-seek."

"Veronica! You cried out. Something's up."

"Steady, Royle," said I. "Always accept a lady's word."

"Thanks," said Veronica. "That's the most sensible thing I've heard since we met."

Before anybody spoke again, Southerfield came across the road.

A mysterious digger in the abbey ruins—searching for buried treasure!

"Missed him," he said. "What's up, Veronica?"

"Nothing, Martin. Tell you tomorrow. Mr. Grenofen—see me as far as Sandpoint, will you?"

Royle seemed on the verge of another outburst, but Southerfield caught his arm, both lingered a moment to say good-night and then walked toward their punt.

Veronica leaned back against the bank again.

"Better now," she said after a few moments.

"That's fine," said I. "Is there anything you want to say to me?"

"Nothing tonight, I think," she replied. "I'm rather tired; I've walked from Hollar Bay station."

We moved away towards her house, I by her side, wondering why she had told me that tarriddle, Hollar Bay was four miles and the station swarmed with taxis.

Suddenly Veronica said: "You're an understanding person. Mr. Grenofen, you know when to keep your thoughts to yourself."

And that was all that passed between us before I left her at the gate of Seabrooke's house.

With my mind full of the chance that Laxton might have arrived at Woodcot while I was absent, I hurried back.

But not far. Just round the bend where the three of us had started running down, I staggered back, struck by the dazzling light of a torch shot at me from a distance of two or three yards.

Instantly the light vanished, leaving me groping. I heard a sound of rapid footsteps. Then silence. Having hesitated a second or two, I moved upwards, nerves a little frayed.

"Don't be alarmed, Mr. Grenofen," said a voice, and a figure dimly moved out from the hedge. But I recognized the voice. It was Professor Laxton's.

"Did you show that light?" I said angrily.

"Certainly not, Mr. Grenofen. I couldn't see the man who did—My car broke down at Brimpton, 3 miles away, and I was trying to find Woodcot. Fortunately for me, he lit up your face."

My anger subsided and we walked on to my home. Mother greeted us, set out supper for Laxton and retired. Afterwards, Laxton and I sat in the den smoking.

"Laxton and Grenofen are destined to meet a still more interesting puzzle in tomorrow's chapter."

strokes and then an inspection with the aid of the light.

Our observation of the uncanny sight was abruptly terminated. The sound of movement close at hand reached us out of the darkness—a kind of sliding footstep. It was unmistakably coming towards us.

Half a dozen footsteps and a pause. More steps, another pause. The author of those steps, too, was watching the digger outside. He was creeping from window to window. In a few seconds he would reach ours.

My nerves gave an involuntary jump as the swish of a skirt struck me on the knee as it passed. We heard a rapid padding of feet that indicated running.

"A woman! Well, I'm—" Laxton exclaimed.

His voice had simply splintered the silence. The light outside was immediately doused. We heard a tool dropped. Then silence.

"I'll go round to the right," Laxton whispered. "You take the other end."

I dashed to the other side of the excavation. A minute later, I heard a running step—I could see nothing. Following it another and lighter tread with longer stride. A shadow passed at about 20 feet and I followed across the lawn until I met Laxton.

In silence we searched up and down the driveway, over the lawns, and all without result. The fugitive had melted away. We stood hesitating for a moment, afraid to make a sound.

This time I gripped his arm. I was looking up the drive when I saw the shadow pass on to the turf. The shadow came swiftly towards us, went beyond us and silently entered a house.

Ten minutes after Laxton and I were outside the walls of Newplace. "What house was that?" Laxton asked.

"Marling's," I replied.

"It's puzzling. Who was the woman I wonder?"

"Marling was the woman," said I. "Marling always wears a cassock. You'd easily mistake him for a woman in this pitchy darkness!"

A DETECTIVE STORY

Somewhere along the Bidford Down

Or Bidford moor or glen,
A traveler on his way to town
Passed three wild-looking men.
A quarter of a mile away
He found a lump of lifeless clay,
And stooping down, he recognized
Sir Henry Wot, whom he despised.

Sir Henry owned the village bank,
A miser through and through;
Although he boasted noble rank,
His past nobody knew.

But from his history it appears
He'd been respectable for years,
Although 'twas hinted in his time
His hands had once been steeped
With crime.

Two days before a dreadful row
By chance was overheard,
Which seems to me important now,
So strangely it occurred.

A man no one had seen before
Opened Sir Henry's office door, Shouting: "I've come to get my share!"

Sir Henry fainted in his chair.

The town policeman bungled things,
As town policemen do;
They lacked the wit the novice brings

For tracing down a clue.
They knew Sir Henry Wot was dead,
But otherwise were quite misled,
Because they searched for persons who

Seemed likeliest such crimes to do.

But Arthur Wise, a bright young man,
Who scoffed at Scotland Yard,
To solve the problem had a plan,
Nor did he find it hard.

"I'll land the guilty one," said he,
"Somewhere in chapter thirty-three."

The man who murdered Henry Wot
Was mentioned once and then forgot."

Little Jack Rabbit

By David Cory

Well, it is certainly mighty lucky that somebody with a friendly voice shouted just as I ended the last story.

"Don't you touch my little bunny. Things to you won't seem so funny, Danny Fox, in just a minute. Guess you won't find much fun in it."

And, would you believe it? before that wicked old fox could catch our dear little rabbit the Old Brown Horse galloped out from behind a clump of trees and let fly both hind legs. Yes, sir, he turned right around as quick as a flash and let fly with both hind feet, sending Danny Fox through the air like a hairy four footed, two eared football.

"Never come back!" shouted the Old Brown Horse, as the old fox landed half a mile away. Then, turning to the little bunny, he enquired: "Are you all right, Bunni-kins?"

"Yes, I think so," answered the little rabbit still all a-tremble with fright. "I—I am so glad you came just when you did."

"No, it wouldn't have done much good had I been a minute later," chuckled the good old horse. "But, now that trouble is over, can't you stop shaking?"

"I'll try to," promised the little rabbit.

"Here, hop on my back," said the Old Brown Horse, kneeling down. Then away they went, the old horse trotting trot, and the little rabbit bumpety bump on his back. By and by, after a while, and a laugh and a smile, they came to a big wide river.

"I'm not a very good swimmer," apologized the good old horse, "but maybe I can manage to get across."

"Perhaps you had better not take a chance," advised the little rabbit, but the Old Brown Horse kept right on wading into the water, and pretty soon it was as high as his shoulder. All of a sudden his feet couldn't touch bottom. Only a little bit of the top of his back was above the water, and the little bunny had to pull up his feet to keep them dry, and to hug tight to the old brown horse to keep from slipping off,—hold tight to his mane, you know.

They were now out in the middle of the river, where the water ran fast and furious. Dear me, it was now hard work to swim, and the tired old steed began to pant and puff. Down the river they drifted with the fast flowing current.

"I guess I'm all in," panted the poor old horse. "I never was a fine swimmer. The race track was the place where I could show my heels to the best of them."

"What are we going to do?" asked the anxious little rabbit, as they drifted farther and farther down stream. The trees on the shore nodded and seemed to beckon them to swim to land. The white, fleecy clouds up in the sky took the shape of fingers pointing to the shore. The poor old horse was now all tired out, and, his long, thin legs made poor paddle wheels. If only his feet had been flat like those of Duck Waddles it would have been an easy matter to make the shore and land his little bum passenger. Dear, dear me! I hope nothing dreadful happens before the next story is written.

Is It Safe to Drink?

YOU can't see them—you can't even taste them—but they're there—those tiny living organisms that multiply so rapidly in food when the temperature creeps above fifty degrees—the danger point. Food exposed soon decomposes and becomes unsafe to eat.

Doctors and public health authorities are agreed that only artificial refrigeration the year around safely guards perishable food products.

Backporch, cellar, pantry, window-box—all are unsatisfactory, unsanitary. They keep food too warm—or what is equally dangerous—too cold, for meats decompose rapidly after being frozen and vegetables are entirely ruined.

Safeguard your family's health by providing Automatic Electric Refrigeration. Then you will be sure that the food they eat is kept fresh and wholesome, free from dangerous bacteria.

Electric Refrigeration

Come in today and see the Electric Refrigerators. Automatically, economically, and without attention they provide the constant cold at the exact temperature needed for proper food preservation.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEWS ADAMS

PARK BENCHES

I WRITE this talk in a Seattle Hotel, after a beautiful drive about this wonderful city. It has been three years since I visited this growing town. I hardly knew it. Great rows of buildings have been replaced with beautiful structures and the stores and show windows are as attractive as any along Fifth Avenue in New York City.

Recently Marshall Field & Company, of Chicago, bought the largest department store in this city, which seems to prove that those who have built that most marvelous of all great stores see in this great country a distinct opportunity for commercial gain.

Seattle is beautifully located. You see water in almost every direction. Great boats come from all parts of the world and visitors from all parts of America stream into this city day after day. I was standing upon a corner studying the crowds that went by when I overheard a remark by one of two women who passed by: "Why, this is a beautiful city. I like it better than New York City!" I smiled, being from New York City myself.

But I must go back to my drive today. The far seeing citizens of this town have reserved vast spaces for their parks. And in these parks are scores and scores of benches. But on none of them did I see people sitting. I inquired of my friend the reason, and he simply said: "People out here have no use for benches. They like the open air of the hills, the beaches, the roads like the mountains, the life upon the water."

All along the ways that lined the water I saw hundreds of little children in bare feet, and with their bathing suits, on their way to the shores. And most of these shores were almost a part of their front doors!

Across from one part of the city lies a beautiful island called Mercer Island. It is heavily wooded and extends a long distance. Hardly half an hour by boat and you are on its shores. Yet it is little inhabited, for this is a new country. This city of around 400,000 is hardly 40 years old! It is a town of homes. You see few apartment buildings here.

Back East, where I must soon go, I shall see the city park benches filled with people, but out here they are empty. This great Northwest is in the early making. Here the thing that impresses you most is—room, room, room! It is a happy Empire in itself.

If a Husky had the Speed of a Greyhound

THE modern, high-compression, high-speed motor demands an oil that will stand up under the excessive heat generated and will function as near perfectly as is humanly possible under the conditions prevalent in today's motors. The problem has been to secure in one oil the best qualities of the finest paraffine and naphthene crude oils. In our laboratories we have perfected a blend of lubricating oil made from two crude oils. It has advantages only to be found in a two-base oil. If you regard your motor with the affection you have for a favorite dog (as some of us do) you should at least try and note the results in performance and economy. Drive to the nearest Gulf dealer at the sign of the Orange Disc. Fill up your crankcase with the grade suitable for your car—then let your motor guide your choice in the future.

Paris Hides Old Woman Foe of The Czars

By T. T. Topping
Paris (AP)—Paris, eventual haven of political refugees fleeing from the turmoil of revolutions that failed, has become the home of Catherina Brechko-Brechkovskia. She is "the grandmother of the Russian revolution," meaning that revolution which overthrew Nicholas II and established the ill-fated Kerepsky regime in the land of the czars.

Besides being an uncompromising foe of czarism, she is equally opposed to bolshevism. She is certain that the present Union of Soviet Socialist Republics will fall, and that within a few years. Fully one-third of her 86 years have been passed as a prisoner. Under the Czar she served 14 years at hard labor, followed by 13 years of mere exile in Siberia. She had 12 years of hiding in old Russia and six years of existence under Czarist police supervision, during which she managed to sand-wich in two trips to the United States.

"The Babouchka," as she is fondly called by Russians of her political faith, is sanguine that the Bolshevik regime will collapse within a few years and that she, despite her years, will live to see it. She hopes to make a solemn re-entrance into the old Russian capital when that city shall have lost its sobriquet of Leningrad, and again become Petrograd.

"The grandmother of the revolution" has already enjoyed one triumphant return of that sort. That was in 1917 and it lasted eight months. But when the Bolsheviks entered the "Babouchka" went out. Living in a peaceful "pension" in the fashionable Passy quarter, the old lady, dressed in black, except for a white shawl about her shoulders, enjoys talking about her trips to the United States.

"I went to America for the first time in 1904," she said. "I had just completed a 14-year sentence at hard labor in Siberia and I received a very cordial welcome in the United States."

"Asked if, coming after Siberia, any country would not have been heaven, she said:

"Yes, but the Americans were really very nice to me. Effectively the Americans are real democrats but I found that they were very badly informed about Russian affairs."

In the same breath "Babouchka" said that she was introduced into American political circles by Emma Goldman, but evidently without any intention of establishing a co-relation between that and America's ignorance of things Russian. She feels that she owes much gratitude to America because "it was owing to the pressure of public opinion from the United States that I was halted on the road to my third exile in Siberia and released at Irkutsk in 1915." That the Soviet jail is the most abominable thing on earth and that Danté might have picked up there many features for his Inferno, is her firm conviction. "The Bolsheviks have transformed an earthly paradise into a gigantic cemetery, the granary of the world into a country of famine. They are bound to succumb," she concluded.

Washington Highlights

By Herbert Plummer

Washington—In East Washington, near the Anacostia river between Potomac and Pennsylvania avenues, lie 31½ acres of ground—the gloomiest spot in the national capital, yet one of the most historic.

It is off the beaten track of tourists. Unless the visitor knows about the place and expresses a desire to go there it more than likely will go unnoticed.

Since 1807 the place has been known as the Congressional cemetery. Within are buried some of Relief From Curse Of Constipation

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the People's Drug Store—adv.

the most illustrious people in the history of this country. It is hard to imagine an enclosure more gloomy. Located in the vicinity of an almshouse and a workhouse, even the surrounding neighborhood is one that definitely depresses.

The vestry of Christ church in Washington founded the Congressional cemetery in 1807, when it issued an appeal for funds to provide a place for interment of the bodies of the prominent men in national life who attended services there.

Markers For All

The original idea was to put up a stone for every member of congress who died during his term of office, whether he was to be buried there or not. Thirteen United States senators, including William Pinkney, of Maryland, and approximately 60 representatives were buried there.

In 1876 congress took cognizance of the rapid rate in which the cemetery was being filled up. Consequently, in that year a law was passed prohibiting the erection of cenotaphs to members of congress unless their bodies were actually interred there. Some 176 cenotaphs had been placed there, 100 of which were for government officials and 76 for senators and representatives.

A stroll through these 31½ acres and one will run across the graves of men who have long since been forgotten, but who during their life played an important part in the history of the country.

Tobias Lear, the long trusted private secretary of George Washington, was buried there after he had committed suicide.

Two In Same Grave

The bodies of Captain Beverley and Abel Upshur, secretary of state, lie in the same grave, resting exactly as they died in the explosion of the U. S. S. Princeton.

Push Ma Ta Ha, the famous Choctaw Indian chief, rests there. He was a member of the delegation of his people who came to Washington in 1824. On Christmas eve he died of croup in the capital. His last words, "When I am gone, let the big guns be fired over me," are inscribed on his tomb.

William Wirt, who wrote "The Life of Patrick Henry" and was attorney general of the United States from 1817 to 1820, is buried there.

George Clinton, an early governor of New York and vice president of the United States, also rests there.

One of the most interesting graves is that of a Count Gurovski. He was the husband of the infanta of Spain and was a figure in civil war days. Gurovski was intimately known to the diplomatic corps and was generally deemed a spy. His body lies under a crested stone. There are many others. Frederick William III, king of Prussia, ordered a monument erected over the grave of his resident minister, the Chevalier Frederick Grehun, who died in 1828, which may still be seen.

A pit 175 feet deep provides thrills of deep sea fishing for residents of Sharon Springs, Kas. Scientists disagree on the cause of the phenomenon.

GREENCASTLE MAKES MERRY

Tenth Triennial Old Home Week Celebration; Henry P. Fletcher To Attend.

Hundreds of former residents of Greencastle attending the tenth triennial Old Home Week celebration Monday revisited the scenes of their youth and talked over the days when they were "kids."

The second day of the celebration included a tour of the town, and the surrounding territory and here and there could be seen little groups of men and women all reminiscing.

Judge Davison Speaks

At the conclusion of the tour all gathered in the public square, where Watson R. Davison, presiding judge of the Franklin County courts, delivered an address, paying tribute to the surviving members of the first Old Home Week committee and the originator of the plan, Prof. Philip Baer.

At the conclusion of his address, Judge Davison presented a gold watch to Professor Baer on behalf of the Old Home Week Association.

The Greencastle Kiwanis Club was host to the visiting Kiwanians, Judge Davison making the address and reviewing briefly the changes in Greencastle during recent years.

Bands Give Concert

The day's program came to a close with a joint concert in the public square by the Rescue Hose Company Band, of Greencastle, and the Williamsport Band, of Williamsport, Maryland.

One of Greencastle's most distinguished sons, Henry P. Fletcher, former Ambassador to Italy, is expected to arrive home Friday. The Fletcher family is one of the best known in Antrim township, and has taken an active part in the triennial celebration since it was founded.

Mrs. William Morgan Smith, of Rosamont, Va., owns a lap desk on which, she asserts, Thomas Jefferson penned the Declaration of Independence.
